

It's not for "no reason", there is a good reason: For Ultima II, I asked Dupre what he wanted to say. He offered "Wanna buy a duck?", then expected the player to keep the duck for eggs or one big meal. But I only had tech for text not sale, eggs or eating. So text alone went in!

Shamino: "Perhaps there's a little of Lord British in us all."
Lord British in us all:
(Might color this one later)
(This is a doll of course)
(I heard that Dragons like ducks for no reason so I also draw one, I'm experienced in drawing rubber duckies (no))

Sorry for exposing my lack of knowledge in Ultima II (nervous)... Learning new things about Ultima everyday (and surprisingly sometimes from Lord British himself!) :D

A lot of us didn't know this; it was certainly news to me! I think the latest theory was "Wanna buy a duck" was a children's game and Dupre was referencing it because he was drunk.

I thought it may have been referencing a Marx Brothers routine.

I think that may be where Dupre got the original idea germination.
